A GENTILE LOOKS AT ZIONISM

A review by Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath

The absolute impartiality of Reverend John Haynes Holmes of the Community Church in New York City cannot in any way be impugned. For years this keen student of religion, this penetrating thinker and courageous prophet has championed the cause of the Jew and Judaism to so marked a degree that it was he, rather than any Jewish leader, whom Nathan Strauss recently selected to dedicate his health center in the Holy Land. Upon the basis of that series of sermons, unparalleled by any gentile preacher in the annals of the past in their fairness and objectivity, as a result of that unprejudiced exposition of Judaism and Christianity which he delivered in his church last year, John Haynes Holmes, through the generosity of that peer of all Jewish philanthropists, set out for Palestine last Fall, and happy were we who followed this perspicacious preacher in his journeys as recounted each week in the Unity magazine. Upon his return, he spoke before many different organizations in New York and elsewhere upon his findings in Palestine. His generous praise of the labors of the Chalutzim, his apotheosis of the regeneration which the Jew has brought to Zion, couched in such vivid phrases as these: "Where formerly were barren hillsides and fetid marches are today the homesteads and farmlands of more than one hundred Jewish colonies; orange groves cover with fragrance and beauty what were formerly the waste and desolate sand dunes of the Mediterranean shore. Wheat and barley yield their abundant harvest in lowlands drained of those stagnant pools which smote even the wandering horseman with disease and death. New planted forests dot a land long since stripped of trees; factories and power plants break the ancient silences with the modern clash of the machine: towns with schools and libraries and cultured citizens cover a country given over to the mud hut of the illiterate villager or the goatskin tent of the primitive nomad." Such lavish paeans of praise, together with his scathing denunciation of the superstitious cults with which official Christianity still busies itself in the Holy Land, cheered many a Jewish heart, and brought forgiveness to one who had committed the fatal trespass a year or so before of urging that the time had come for Jew and Christian to worship together. Such fervor for Zion warmed the cockles of our hearts and we were quite ready to acclaim Holmes (almost) as our own.

But with the appearance of his most timely book on this subject, ("Palestine To-day and To-morrow", MacMillan Company) we wonder just what will now be the reception accorded to this most fair minded of modern preachers. That staunch and sometimes overly sensitive Zionists are going to take umbrage at his conclusions we have not the slightest doubt. We feel certain that many will take issue with this splendid volume, but to refute its findings will be a bit more difficult than merely to disagree.

The book opens with "Journeyings," a chapter containing most of the material which he published last winter in his travel diary: a fascinating, astute, and deeply appreciative account of his adventure, punctuated with illuminating flashes of wit, irony, and delicious humor, of which only a Holmes is capable. Then comes a somewhat sketchy, but for its purposes a wholly adequate, summary of Zionism which began in purely mystic and messianic expectations and culminated in the mighty Zionistic movement of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. All this will be highly acceptable even to the most rabid of nationalists, and were Holmes to have ended his book here, all would marvel at so true an appreciation of Zionism coming from a "goy."

But as he proceeds to plunge into those deeply rooted causes of the recent riots he is bound to stir up a hornet's nest of opposition. In the first place, he maintains that these "riots which shocked the world were not really riots at all, but war. The Arabs, who engaged in the upheaval, were prevailingly savage tribesmen, whose motive was not plunder, but revolt." Nor did this conflict constitute a "holy war, prompted by religious fanaticism, but a political and social uprising prompted by nationalistic pride. The dispute at the Wailing Wall was merely a spark which kindled the long accumulated fuel of a people's grievances."

And these grievances on the part of the Arab arise out of the fact that he feels, whether rightly or wrongly, that the Jew is driving him from his hearth and home. The Jew may be ever so patient with him, the Jew may permit him to remain many months, or even years, on the land which the Jew has purchased at outrageously exhorbitant prices, but sooner or later, the Arab fellaheen who has not benefitted materially from the vast sums of gold that has been covetously gobbled up by the absentee landlords, sooner or later, the Arab fellaheen must wander on in search of some other grassy plot in an all too arid land. So fear seized his heart and behind this fear stalks the grim ghost of the Balfour Declaration pledging to the Jew the support of one of the most powerful nations on earth to facilitate the establishment in Palestine of a National Jewish Home. Remembering the promise of full emancipation made by Britain to him likewise the Arab feels himself betrayed; he is resentful and sullen. A storm of resentment surges in his breast: a resentment that is as anti-English as it is anti-Jewish, and although the method in which he expressed his hatred and fear and rancour was reprehensible to the extreme, still, the motives that prompted the riots are deeply rooted in human nature, and can never be solved by bayonets or battleships or bombing planes. Such would undoubtedly put a stop to such murderous massacres, but eventually they would lead to an Arab-Moslem uprising such as would steep the entire world in another dread cataclysm of war.

Such is the impasse according to Holmes to which a dispassionate study of the Jewish and Arab claims leads us; but the writer does not despair of an ultimate solution. Like Judah Leon Magnes, (one might even hazard the guess that Holmes and Magnes discussed this issue at some length when they journeyed together through the Holy Land) he counsels a complete repudiation of all nationalistic ambitions, that these two peoples, "not as Arabs nor as Jews, but as Palestinians, might create as surely and swiftly as possible their common home." Different as Arab and Jew are in culture and temperament, still Holmes believes that they have such a common cause: to emancipate themselves from a foreign, and as the author of this book points out, an unsympathetic government, and to "find their common loyalties and interests in a land that is mutually their own." Thus, and thus only, will peace be secured and Israel will fulfill her destiny, not by adding another "petty state, feverish with pride" to the already too numerous nations, not by merely unfurling another superfluous banner amid the "confusion of flags, frontiers, the trappings

WHEN our head swells beyond a 7¼ hat size we go off by ourselves and try to forget how good we are, — how wide our assortments, how low our prices. But it's hard to be modest just before holiday time when we're so particularly good. It's hard to keep quiet about our charming groceries when we know Montrealers are getting the legs of their dinner tables reinforced for the holidays. We can't do it, that's all. A miniature Zionist Congress was held Sunday, December 5th., at Zionist Headquarters, Leon Motzkin (Sam Chait) occupied the chair. Chaim Weizmann (B. Figler) submitted a report on the activities of the Zionist Executive. Henrietta Szold (Miss L. Schultz) reported on the remarkable educational program of the Zionist Executive. Arthur Ruppin (N. Klein) attacked the Zionist Executive; Louis Lipsky (S. Agramson) informed the Congress of the American point of view; Nahum Sokolow (H. Halperin) eulogized Herzl and emphasized his part and influence in the movement; Ben Gurion (D. Lewis) represented the views of the working class in Palestine, addressing the assembly in Yiddish and English; Yehudi (C. Garber) depicted a pathetic picture of the conditions of the Jews in Russia; Harry Sachse (C. Rosen) refuted the attacks on the Executive; M. Ussishkin (N. Schwartz) attacked Jabotinsky for his intolerance and lack of co-operation; finally, Chaim Weizmann replied to Jabotinsky's attack directed against him and the Executive, saying that all the members had worked their hardest and done their best but if anyone else believed himself possessed of greater capabilities he was welcome to assume the responsibilities attached.

DRY FEET

There are certain small things which, if neglected, may cause a considerable amount of discomfort; whereas, if attended to, they go far to make for comfort. One of these is the question of keeping the feet dry. If we allow our feet to become wet and then sit for some hours at home, in school or at work, the chilling of the feet, while the rest of the body is warm, does, for some reason, predispose to colds in the head. In order to avoid head colds which are such a nuisance and which, sometimes, lead to serious trouble, the feet should be kept dry and warm.

It is much more sensible to buy a pair of rubbers than to spend money on doctor's bills. It is much better to take an extra minute or two to put on a pair of rubbers than it is to spend a day or two in bed as a result of having got the feet wet.

It is not always possible for us to avoid wet feet; sometimes the rain is unexpected and we are caught unawares. In such cases, shoes and stockings should be changed without delay, and the feet given a brisk rub with a rough towel.

Clothes should be worn according to the thermometer. In winter, shoes should have thick soles, or light shoes should be worn under overshoes. If woollen stockings are necessary to keep the feet warm, they should be worn. There is a difference in individuals; some require heavier foot clothing than others in order to keep the feet warm. This is something which we must learn from our own experience and by which we must be guided.

Parents will find that they will accomplish something worth while in preventing colds if they make sure that their children's feet are kept dry and warm during the winter season. It requires a little preparation in the way of providing rubbers and overshoes, and, when they are provided, it needs some supervision to see that they are worn, but the effort will be well repaid in greater freedom from this winter nuisance and danger.

Questions, concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

General Conditions Fundamentally Sound

Sir Charles Gordon, President, at Annual Meeting of Bank of Montreal, Draws Attention to Great Strides Made by Canada During Recent Years.

Sir Charles Gordon's presidential address at the annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal will exert a far-reaching influence upon economic conditions in Canada.

Reviewing the business situation in Canada, Sir Charles referred to the unbroken expansion of the first ten months of the year and extending back over a five-year period, the most marked advance being in the field of mining, and he said that Canadian activity was such that the Canadian banks took no special advantage of the high rates offered in New York; their money was fully employed in the Dominion "and every legitimate need of this country was taken care of at much lower rates than prevailed in the United States."

There is good ground for general business confidence in Sir Charles Gordon's statement that no inflation is apparent in any of the basic commodities of Canadian commerce. He spoke frankly of such unfavorable influences as the reduction in the crop and its slow movement, and the collapse of stock market prices. On the other hand, mining and industrial development in the West, and branch-line railway construction, are beneficial influences; building has been at its peak; markets are being found for new developments of hydro-electric power, and while immigration shows a decline there is also a reduction in the loss through emigration. Coming to the trade situation in Canada, Sir Charles said in part:

"Fundamental conditions are sound, and there is no reason for apprehension as to the ultimate future of Canada."

General Manager's Address

Mr. H. B. Mackenzie, the general manager, surveyed the bank's operations of the past year and made a pregnant diagnosis of actual economic conditions.

Mr. Mackenzie's analysis of the salient features of the balance sheet is not only convincing of a healthy growth in the volume of the bank's business and of its strong liquid position, but it is testimony also of a determination to continue the sane, sound and energetic management that is traditional of the institution. "Our customers in all lines of production and commerce," he said, "have, as always, been our chief care, and their needs have been fully supplied; but we have recently been declining numerous applications, large and small, for loans against good collateral but to be used for other than business purposes, generally the purchase of securities. These applications had become so numerous that they threatened to encroach upon the money needed to finance the country's business."

There is in the proceedings at the Bank of Montreal meeting abundant proof that credit is sound. "Business," Mr. Mackenzie said, "will be somewhat quieter while we are getting back to realities, but the realities in both countries—Canada and the United States—afford firm basis for a healthy optimism."

CANADIAN INDUSTRIAL ALCOHOL

The annual report of Canadian Industrial Alcohol justified the statement made by president Lord Shaughnessy some time ago that the dividend was being well maintained. Net earnings for the year were equivalent to $1.90 a share on the stock outstanding as against dividend requirements of only $1.52.

Earnings however are down rather sharply from the preceding year when over $2.80 a share was shown on the stock, while the balance sheet also reflects the more difficult operating conditions during the year, the working capital being down almost $1,500,000. Liquid position is still substantial, however, at $6,-700,941.

ASBESTOS CORPORATION

Weakness in all classes of Asbestos Corporation—more especially the recent decline in the market price of the general mortgage bonds—has given rise to persistent rumors that the half yearly interest payment on the junior bonds would not be much. Enquiry of President Massey, however, elicited the statement that there was one thought in the minds of officers and directors of not paying interest and sinking fund requirements in the bonds.

DRYDEN PAPER

Rumors on the Street name Dryden as the next acquisition of Canada Power & Paper Corporation which, during the past few years has been so active in absorbing units in the various paper fields. In the light of the recent purchase of Wayagamack—the other major factor in the kraft industry—the addition of Dryden would round out the big organization's interests in this field.

Dryden is understood to have enjoyed a healthy improvement in operations during the past year, demand for its production under the new contract with the Bates Valve Bag Co., which controls the process for manufacturing cement, flour, and sugar bags from kraft paper—has been such that the company has had to add materially to mill capacity. Earnings for the year, after all charges, are unofficially estimated at around $2 a share on the stock.

SOUTHERN CANADA POWER

New high records in all directions are indicated in the annual report of Southern Canada Power Co., for the year ended September 30, 1929. Gross

Common Stocks at Buying Levels Following Recovery From Break

A CANVASS among the brokerage community indicates plainly that market observers are almost unanimously of the opinion that the break of late October and early November saw common stock levels at their base—for some time at least.

With the banks reducing then marginal requirements and constructive developments in the way of increased dividends and splits being announced, there was an evident fear in some quarters that prices would snap back too quickly under an excess of buying enthusiasm, with the inevitable result of a repetition of panicky liquidation. Evidently, however, caution still prevailed, and this, combined with the reduced buying power resulting from the recent melting away of resources, has meant a limited public participation and a steady and sane improvement in the levels of worth while stock.

It is a notable fact that interest in speculative issues or stocks representative of more or less "lame" industries has been practically absent, and the demand for standard issues such as Power, Shawinigan, Power Corp., Bridge, National Steel Car, Canadian Car, etc., indicates strong investment buying, especially in such stocks as offer a favorable yield in addition to healthy prospect for the future.

If buying can be kept within bounds into the new year—as appears likely—good markets in the spring are indicated. Industrial conditions are sound, many corporations reported a consistent expansion in business and earnings with promise of the imported conditions continuing well into next year, which is as far as can be estimated ahead in business conditions.

Provided care is taken in choosing the issues investment buying at today's levels, even taking into consideration the recovery which has already been made by many sound issues, is justified.

INTERNATIONAL NICKEL

News from Sudbury now is that Nickel will open-cut the section of the Frood mine above the 1200 foot level. The bulk of the ore in this section is low grade and will be put through the concentrator to bring up the average. It is for this reason, states the report, that concentrator capacity is being increased to 8 to 9,-000 tons. A tremendous tonnage of ore is contained in the Frood above 1,200 feet, something like 50,000,000 tons with an average grade of around $13. per ton.

PEND OREILLE

In denial of rumors of a bearish nature circulated in eastern Canada regarding Pend Oreille, president L. P. Larsen replied by wire as follows:

"The strong rumors mentioned in your wire are so ridiculous and contrary to the facts that it would appear to be deliberate attempts of persons who have sold stock which they did not have in order to stampede shareholders."

"Developments of drill holes show metal contents more than two times the grade heretofore considered as average. The recent crosscut on the 300 foot level shows over 80 feet of ore averaging better than 20% combined lead and zinc."

LAKE SHORE MINES

Ore bins are now completed at the headframe of the new shaft on the Lake Shore, according to latest work from Kirkland Lake. Excellent progress is being made in the development program. Results at depth in the mine are favorable, concludes the despatch.

INTERNATIONAL MINING

International Mining Corporation, the new $40,000,000 development company and investment trust, is seeking control of Amulet, according to reports published in the north. The corporation is said to be waiting for results from present drilling before taking any action.

PREMIER GOLD

The report has been current for sometime that the much talked of deal whereby Premier Gold will take over and operate B. C. Silver and Sebakwe, will be consummated in the near future.

While there is nothing official on this report, still it appears to be given considerable credence in well informed circles.

AMULET MINES

At a meeting of the directors of Amulet Mines, Limited, held last week, Fred M. Connell, of Toronto, was elected president to replace the late Russell Popham.

The general manager in a statement to directors reported that the construction of the railway spur line and the mill were well advanced.

McINTYRE PORCUPINE

Provided the development in lower levels and in the easterly part of McIntyre Porcupine succeeds in adding in a big way to ore reserves within the next months, there is every likelihood of additional mill construction being commenced in the early spring. The idea in view would be to establish ore reserves at around $25,000,000 by the time such mill construction could be completed. The experimental work now being conducted in the McIntyre mill is calculated to pave the way to a process which would fit in with a modern mill. Much of the equipment now in use is growing old, while officials themselves declare the milling process is obsolete in some respects.

ROYALITE OIL

In no small measure responsible for the decline in market valuation of Alberta Oil stocks, according to some observers, has been the gradual descent of Royalite shares from the year's high of $200, reached in March 1929, to the low around $70, recorded in the first week of November.

While the decline is perhaps mainly attributable to the general market condition, it is recognized as a fact that this "bellwether" among Alberta oil stocks, the leading Imperial Oil Company subsidiary in the Alberta Oil industry, has been affected by the gradual freezing off and decline in production from the famous Royalite No. 4 well.

SENATOR OIL & GAS

A wire from Wainwright states a discovery of importance has been made on the holdings of the Senator Oil and Gas Development Co. In drilling the water well, preliminary to commencing work on the oil well, two gas pockets were encountered, the main one capable of producing 400,000 cubic feet of gas daily.

The Senator Oil & Gas Development Co., Ltd., is a new incorporation, formed for the purpose of developing their holdings of some 295 acres in the Wainwright field, Alberta. The head office of the company is in Ottawa.

MERLAND OILS

It is reported that the Merland well in southernmost part of Turner Valley, blew in at a depth of 4,470 feet in the Dalhousie sands, with estimated flow of 30,000,000 cubic feet of very wet gas and that a leading drilling operator says it is the biggest well in Turner Valley. Loss of derrick, which occurred from a spark created by terrific gas pressure, is unfortunate, but only temporary delays production. The company carried maximum insurance. The well is not injured.

earnings show a gain of almost $300,000 at $2,095,912, net income is up about $150,000 at $1,348,549; and net earnings applicable to dividends $120,000 higher at $791,792.

Earnings on the common stock are equivalent to $1.23 a share, this comparing with 94 cents a share for the preceding year.

BRUCK SILK CO.

Wide expansion in operations and in productive capacity of the Company's mills during the period are reflected in the annual report of Bruck Silk Mills, which shows earnings on the outstanding common stock equal to $2.80 a share, this comparing with $1.67 a share for the previous 9 months.

Gross earnings are shown up at $531,308 from $332,885 and net earnings up at $395,260 from $247,241. Net working capital shows a substantial improvement, being over $200,000 higher at $481,460.

MONTREAL POWER

Buying of Power was based on a renewal of rumors that a split up in the stock and another customer ownership campaign are eventualities of the early future.

It is stated in some quarters that the break in the market was responsible for directors deferring plans which already had been made but that, with the good buying which has made its appearance recently the scheme worked out may be brought to early consummation.

HEBREW LADIES RELIEF SOCIETY

The Hebrew Ladies Relief Society held a board meeting at Horn's Cafeteria, Bleury St., Wednesday afternoon, December 4. Mrs. R. Kaufman presided. Mrs. A. Proctor, of Chicago, donated a beaded bag of her own handicraft as a raffle. $10.50 was realized at the meeting. The raffle, donated by Mrs. J. Merson, netted $9.50 and was won by Mrs. R. Ness, who donated $1. Mrs. R. Kaufman thanked the hostesses, Mesdames J. Merson and A. Rost. Next meeting, nomination and election of officers at the Montefiore Orphans Home, Mance St., Wednesday evening, December 11. Rabbi Lasaroff, of New York, will be a guest.

VICTOR CHENKIN CAPTURES AUDIENCE.

Since Isa Kremer startled Montreal some years ago with her vivid art, nothing has been heard in the singing of folksongs in costume to equal the recital given Wednesday evening, December 4, at the Monument National by Victor Chenkin. Mr. Chenkin appeared in five groups of songs, singing in French, German, Italian, Russian, Hebrew, as well as in dialect. Each song group dramatized a contrasting type of character and was performed in its own special costume.

His Chassidic and Ukrainian songs were his best numbers. Mr. Chenkin has a remarkable pantomimic gift and choice of costume and skill at make-up gave color to his program.

MELSAB CLUB PLANS CONCERT

Monday, December 2nd, at the Y. W. H. A. a debate was held on "Resolved that modern morals be condemned." Affirmative Anne Gordon; negative, Fannie Shapiro, won. Judges, Reba Gross, Sarah Schneider and Sarah Pashlin. Monday, December 9th, a "Scrap Literature" meeting will be held. An at home will be in concert form within a few weeks at the Y. W. Only Jewish songs and literature will be featured. Miss Rae Hersovitch is a new member.

When we grumble against its seemingly ill-advised disposal, can we imagine a Divine Providence pothering His wisdom with paltry monies, mintages, and possessions? May not God regard our envies as an adult smiles upon one child coveting the garish toys of another? Are not all our desires outlived by maturer phases of intellectual refinement and spiritual advance? Does the ownership of the object we ardently craved for at ten years arouse our fervor at twenty? How can we then conceive of an Omnipotence which bestows upon us either a spinning-top or a motor car?

Jewish Campaign Objective Passed at Eleventh Hour

Shortly before 1 o'clock Tuesday morning, with Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Speaker of the House of Commons, and Madame Lemieux looking on, the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies achieved $300,000 to provide the financing of the 15 charities in the federation. A 11 o'clock when the returns were read the campaign workers lacked $31,000 of their objective. Edgar M. Bertiner volunteered to give one-tenth as much as every additional subscriber, which meant that Mr. Bertiner added over $3,100 to his regular subscription. Clarence Michaels, campaign chairman, who has devoted the past six weeks to the campaign, reached his goal, passed it by $950, and then collapsed from the strain.

This campaign was the most difficult in the 12-year history of Federation—for three reasons. Less than three months ago, the Jewish community pledged $1,500,000 to the building of a Jewish General Hospital. October brought the stock market crash. Several of the Jewish citizens who have been the backbone of previous campaigns were too ill to help in this one.

When at two minutes to 1 o'clock Tuesday morning, the deficit had been pared down to $3,550, some 16 members of Federation promised to take care of the balance. The volunteers were: Mark Workman, H. Bronfman, E. Baron, Edward Belmer, Sam Hart, E. Silverstone, A. Z. Cohen, A. M. Sommer, I. Silverstone, Joseph Cohen, K.C., B. Rubin, Ernest G. F. Vaz, Martin Simon, Arthur Simon, Lyon Cohen, Joe Livinson, jr., H. M. Ripstein, D. Kirsch and Sam Ogulnik. H. M. Ripstein was up first with an additional $500. Mark Workman gave $2,000 in addition to his usual subscription of $8,000. J. Levinson jr., gave an addition $250. Abe Bronfman announced an additional $5,000 from the Bronfman Interests. H. Herschon volunteered $150 additional; Isaac Silverstone, $500; Samuel Hart, $1000; C. N. Sommer, $200; Lyon Cohen, $250; Deakin Bros., $250.

Sam Jacobs, M.P., introduced the Speaker of the House of Commons. Joseph Cohen, K.C., moved the vote of thanks. Julius Rost was in charge of the entertainment provided during dinner. Among those seated at the head table were: Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bronfman, Samuel Hart, Mark Workman, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Jassby, David Kirsch, J. Levinson, sr., Louis Salomon, I. Silverstone, A. M. Vineberg, J. Levinson, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Lyon Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. A. Z. Cohen, and Robert Hirsch.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux was the speaker. His address was a tribute to the solidarity of the Jewish race in work for charity. He said:

"As a young man I was associated with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and it was from that eminent statesman that I learned the practice of tolerance and justice to minorities. I well remember the day when despatches announcing pogroms against the Jews in Russia were announced, and Sir Wilfrid expressed himself as follows: 'If they are persecuted in Russia, I shall give the necessary orders to open the gates of Canada to the oppressed Jews.'"

Subscriptions received follows. A revised list and additional subscriptions will be published next week.

COMMENTARIES

By Rabbi HARRY J. STERN, of Montreal,
Associate Contributing Editor

"MODERN IDEAS OF EDUCATION FOUND IN THE TALMUD"

There has just been published a little volume—"Elementary Education in the Talmud", by Rabbi Julius Berger of Montreal. It is a delightful and informative treatise giving a "bird's-eye view, as it were, of the leading landmarks of the education of the Jewish child in the age of the Talmud". The author comes to the conclusion that many principles in vogue in present day pedagogy, have long ago been followed by the Jewish people. Thus he offers passage after passage from the Talmudic lore, to prove that such factors in modern education as child psychology, the flowering forth of the imagination, the Ideal curriculum, and the social life of the child—have been anticipated and even stressed by the Rabbis of the Talmud. Generally speaking, Rabbi Berger's book is a worthy addition to the meagre existing literature in English, on the history of Jewish education.

However, the volume is not free from faults and omissions. In the third chapter, it would have been well to have traced "the origin" of the school in Jewish history. Might it not be that the elementary school arose in the Babylonian Exile, as an adjunct to the Synagogue? Whatever be the genesis of the elementary school, the writer fails to mention a word about it. This I consider a serious omission.

On page twenty-three, the writer states, as a fact, that Joshua ben Gemala, instituted compulsory education among Jews in the first century of the Christian era. This is a matter of dispute among scholars. Some writers credit Simon ben Shebach (75 B.C.E.) as being responsible for the introduction of compulsory education. The Talmud states: "Simon ben Shebach ordained three things": That a man may do business with the Kethubah; that people should send their children to school; that glassware be subject to contamination (Jerusalem Talmud, Kethubath VIII, end.)

The author might also have pointed out that all schools were for boys only and all teachers were men. Quite in contrast with present day conditions in the realm of education.

In the fifth chapter, dealing with the curriculum, the author tells us that music and dancing were taught—but he fails to offer citations from the Talmud to substantiate his statement. He does refer to the Bible. But after all, the writer deals with elementary education in the Talmud and not the scriptures.

Now after pointing out these few minor defects—I am happy to say that I more than welcome this little volume to my library. Rabbi Berger is to be congratulated for finding time amidst a busy ministry to write, study and meditate upon the Torah.

This little volume which throws so much light on early Jewish education, merits a place in every cultured Jewish home. I hope that thinking Jews especially in Montreal will find delight in reading it and rejoicing even as I do, that one of our own students of Torah, has made such a fine contribution to Jewish learning.

"A NON-JEW LOOKING IN"

Professor Eustace Haydon of the University of Chicago is one of the great humanists of our day. I had the privilege of cultivating his friendship a few years ago while taking courses in the Divinity School of the University. Those memorable hours spent in his class room have helped me to obtain an appreciation for all religions that were in the pursuit of truth. Professor Haydon spoke the other day in Cincinnati, to a gathering of Jews and what he had to say is worth recording in our columns.

"I want something more from Judaism than just a religious denomination working out world problems. I like to see the usual attributes preserved. If you can make youth the bearers of the culture of the Jewish past, in relation to modern culture, then you may have a really creative religion—and I believe modern Judaism will be creative. The Jews interpreted religion as social idealism. Not the Wailing Wall, but the torch is the symbol of Judaism—carrying and seeking light."

"If the Jews can make the machine age glorify the spirit of man, they might regain the spiritual leadership of the world."

Judging from the Professor's remarks, he is very close to Judaism. He has faith in it and hope for its future. It is good to see him a non-Jew looking in. It is too bad that many Jews, themselves, never take a "look in"—in the working philosophy of their faith.

A TIRELESS COMMUNITY WORKER

Who in communal work in our city does not know Clarence Michaels? No task is too great for him! Tho young in years, he is a veteran in the service of many organizations. During the recent hospital drive, Clarence worked night and day. As a matter of fact, he "broke down", labouring in the cause of a Jewish hospital. This week, he has been heading the Annual Federation Drive. And how he works! His energy, his enthusiasm, have been admired by all. He is a born organizer. He is a genuine worker not a "shmuser". We are proud of Clarence.

Success may beckon ever so persuasively to the ambitious young man but a deterrent to him in pursuing the goal might well be imagined in the picture of the "successful" man. A very discouraging portrait of the so-called successful man is contained in an article by Dr. Eli Moschowitz of Mount Sinai Hospital in the Journal of the American Medical Association. This article, entitled "Cause of Hypertension of the Greater Circulation," says that many men of the successful class arrive at success only to find themselves victims of hypertension and unable to enjoy the fruits of their labors. This hypertension, or high blood pressure, altho not uncommon among the poor who have lived a hard, strenuous life in the struggle for existence, is called the tragedy of the man who has everything except health. By the success of this type Dr. Moschowitz means "the accumulation of wealth or power that is not always accompanied by spiritual or ethical uplift."

Let the young man who craves wealth and power pause before the writer's warning description of what may happen to him by the time he gets what he wants or arrives at the place he wants to be. "Physically," writes the physician, "there people are soft-muscled, pudgy, short-necked, ungraceful, non-athletic and overweight. They have no illusions. They are tense, irritable and have single minds. While their mental range is narrow, within this range they are terribly tense and pursue their aims with grim determination. Some have achieved success, others have seen success slip from their grasp, but all have lived impetuously keeping the faith of strife and they come to us dyspeptic and diabetic, heavy with fat, dull with headache and insomnia, racked with the pains of angina pectoris, palsied and hopelessly tired. These people in middle age are all burned out."

Dr. Moschowitz lays part of the blame upon the speed of modern living. By the time the modern man attains the age of fifty he has lived two lives compared with the lives of previous generations. The man of the future will be a man old in experience before adolescence has begun. The swiftness of modern progress presents the problem of biologic adaptation. "It is a Frankenstein monster beating out the little lives of men, killing them with the blights of age before they have blossomed."

The writer calls the typical, financially successful man the direct antithesis of the child. He has no time for play. "Here again the child that is in all of us goes early and once it is gone rarely heeds the summons to return." Dr. Moschowitz sees no reason to be surprised at the success of this type. "One can readily grasp why such individuals are successful," he says. "They throw everything in life aside, especially play, that does not contribute to their purpose."

Is it a superficial generalization to say that the successful Jew especially answers this description? From casual observation it would seem to be true that he does. The Gentile family man of prosperity seems to retain his boyishness more than the Jew does. The Jew has taken up golf and may be more than a duffer at it. He may be interested in community or commercialized games and sport. He still lacks the springy, resilient vigor of his Gentile neighbor. He will be sleeping heavily after a heavy meal while this neighbor helps the youngsters with a snow man. He is famous for being a good husband and father and provides lavishly. It is easier to give money than take the time to give himself. Many illusions are cherished about the prosperous Jewish father. Often he is mean and tyrannical, impatient with his children, closed to to their companionship and confidence forever by the indifference and lack of sympathy that are by-products of his absorption in making money. At middle age he may be still unacquainted with his family, a stranger in his own house. People will regard him as a person of power, influence and social position altho he may be an ignorant, disagreeable, over-bearing individual. They will speak with great admiration of what he has accomplished. You may never hear them suggest that he has nothing much besides.

From the Nation: "It was the prophet Isaiah who saw a vision of Judah and Jerusalem nearly three thousand years ago, in which the Lord was to judge among nations and the people to beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning-hooks. It is the modern prophet Judah Magnes, chancellor of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, who sees and preaches a new vision of Jew and Arab cooperating to build in Palestine an interreligious and an interracial home. And it is a bitter and tragic thing that when he stood up in his university to preach that message, so eloquently in accord with the ancient splendor of Jewish tradition, little bitter-minded Jews should have hissed him, a Hebrew newspaper should have called upon his students to strike until he resigned, and the officials of the American Jewish Congress, led by Dr. Stephen S. Wise, should have hastened to denounce him. They seem to want the Jews to follow the alternative method of Joshua. But unfortunately, today, merely to shout with a great shout does not cause walls to come tumbling down.

"What was it that Dr. Magnes said which roused such a turmoil? He said that 'if Jew and Arab are to live together in Palestine it must be as an act of faith—of faith that they are brother peoples, and that they can rise above their weaknesses and their passions, however difficult this may now seem.' Instead of insisting, as the little people do, that the Jews must preserve a flinty solidarity against the Arabs after these months of bloodshed, he talks peace, as he gloriously dared to talk it here in America in the midst of the World War. 'The more generous and open-hearted Jew and Arab are to one another right now during these times of hatred and distress,' he said, 'the longer they will remember each other in gratitude and friendship.' Jewish aspirations, he insisted, would be meaningless if they rested upon the steel of British bayonets, and the Balfour declaration had in some ways been a handicap to real Zionist progress. Dreams of a political Jewish state could not endure. Because Palestine is the holy land of three religions, Dr. Magnes asserted, it would continue to need international government, but he would prefer that the government be more directly responsible to the League of Nations than under the present British mandatory system. The immediate protests in Jerusalem were natural enough products of the inevitable war psychology of people who have lived in fear of their lives for months. But the haste with which the leaders of the American Jewish Congress rushed into print, apparently before they had even read the text of Dr. Magnes's statement, and denounced his attitude as breaking 'the virtually unbroken front of the Jewish people,' was a sad recurrence of war-time psychology." "Yes, soft water in winter time!"

Toronto water, coming into our plant, is softened by a special process, and every single drop used in doing your family wash is also heated to a fixed point and kept there — no more, no less — by a thermostatic control. This assures proper cleaning action, by the purest of soaps. Many rinsings complete our simple process and produce resulting whiteness and freshness utterly impossible under home conditions. We have five different kinds of "family wash" service, all moderately priced. Phone us, or ask any one of our courteous drivers.

and attributes of sovereignty to make the existing nationalistic confusion worse confounded", but by "a deliberate surrender of the 'things of this world' to those high ideals of the Law which are her unique and precious contribution to mankind."

Aside from a few condonable historic references, such as his mistaken identity of "Abulafia of Smyrna in the eighteenth century" thus hopelessly confusing Sabbatai Zevi (1626-1676) with Abraham Abulafia (1220-1290), and his perhaps too persistent stress of Jewish militarism, (the presence of which we do not deny, although we feel that Holmes has been guilty of a rather careless use of language), in such phrases as "it is the tragedy of the dispossession of a primitive and weak people by a civilized and strong people," (he undoubtedly here implies the Jew backed by British arms, but his expressions are most ambiguous)—aside from these few defects, aside from the fact that many will not concur in its conclusions, still the book is an inspired work which should be read by everyone who has any interest whatsoever in Palestine. Above all, it should be translated into Yiddish, for too frequently the purview of our brethren is limited in seeing both sides of a question by the indoctrination of their own press. Objectivity is a prized state of mind which we all should covet and such a student and prophetic spirit as John Haynes Holmes can aid us in achieving this treasured goal as well as pointing out to us through the perspective of distance those obstacles that beset our way, those gaping chasms into which we might blindly stumble and fall. We thank you, Reverend Holmes, and may we profit by the labor which you unselfishly poured into this splendid testament of Zionism.

Former Torontonian Writes From Palestine

From Tel Aviv, 35 Montifiori St., the following letter was written by B. Lasar, formerly of Toronto, to Sam Cohen, Cheriton Avenue, Toronto.

"We had a wonderful trip all over Europe and very interesting time at the Congress, but we had a very unpleasant experience on arriving here. It is all over and let us hope that it will never occur again. I have settled down myself here and we are very satisfied. The life here is much more pleasant than in any part of the world that I have been. The people are of a higher standard. Everyone that has settled to stay here is a one with an ideal, and everyone, no matter where he or she came from took a leading part in certain Zionist work, religious or not, you are talking to an exceptionally intelligent class in Tel Aviv. Here most are people of some independence. The condition in the country is not as it should be. When you are here you see many things from a different angle. I have seen in the press that in Toronto they wanted to send here young men to defend the Jews here. If the Government would permit this, for those here to defend themselves and allow them to have weapons of any kind we would not need any Jewish Legions, as it is it is marvellous how the Hagana, that is the self-protection, are well organized and were disciplined. I came here just in the thick of the trouble and had an opportunity of seeing the bravery, the willingness of self-sacrifice of the Jewish youth. It was marvellous when orders were given to go to a certain dangerous position. Everyone volunteered. There was a scarcity of rifles or guns of any sort so every 10 guns had 16 men. In one case one fell the gun must be taken by one of the Reserves. Had it not been the occurrence of chevron and zfas where the Jewish men were not defending themselves, but were slaughtered like sheep, the Jewish victory would have been great as it is comparing with the 150 or thereabout that fell. No more than 2,000 Arabs fell, but they usually carried their dead with them. There was individual bravery of the highest order. There were two incidents where Arabs in Jerusalem were attacking a desolated Jewish home. There were three Jewish defenders stationed in the neighborhood and orders were not to let the Arabs pass that place and not to leave the position, so they decided one of them should go to assist the Jewish family. The young man who was nicknamed Motke Ganef went out himself against 34 Arabians and as unbelievable it would seem to be, but it is a fact, he killed 5, wounded 8, and the rest scattered. He took with him the two Jewish women and 5 children in safety.

He also captured three donkeys and 2 revolvers and a rifle. Another incident was in Tel Aviv, where a Bucharian Jew was attacked by 4 Arabs. He was a man of 55 years. He was warned not to go to his house, but would not listen. He had a Sefer Tora in his house, so when the Arabs fell on him, he had a Chalef that he used to kill chickens with. Before the Arabs came near him he stopped and then grabbed the first one and cut his throat and for the second he ripped open his belly. The other two ran away and the old man came back with the Tora in his hand cool as a cucumber. In the colonies the Jewish young men stood their ground wherever they had any kind of rifle or gun, but all in all it would be much better if all this had not happened. The industrial condition of the Jewish manufacturers is very critical, practically at a stand still in order to eliminate the boycott against the Jewish industry by the Arabs. There is only one thing to do to find new markets for Palestine produce. One of the greatest problems is the financial condition of the Jewish orange groves. It is the hardest thing in the world to get money if you are stuck. I only had with me $15,000 when I came here and believe me I actually relieved a Canadian who is wealthy and invested nearly $100,000, but got stuck on account of a disagreement with a partner. He is from Winnipeg. He has all his family here and has undertaken a 1000 Dunam to cultivate, and could not get along here. The trouble in the land made it more difficult so when first of October came he was on the way to insolvency. I just came like an angel from Heaven when I gave him my $15,000 and a mortgage and there are many such cases. I am going to invest every cent I own in Erez Israel. I do not know at present, but if the industrial condition will not improve in Erez Israel it is possible that soon I will have to come myself to Canada and try to open a market for various Palestinian produce. There is so much of interest to Canadians to tell but possibly later I will write more."

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for man to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming, and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Editor,
Canadian Jewish Review,

Much as I dislike to disagree with my spiritual adviser, Rabbi Stern, I must take up my pen in defence of the Bnai Brith Lodge of Montreal. While I fully agree with the worthy rabbi as to the importance of an educational survey, we must not blame the Bnai Brith of Montreal for not undertaking this work which is of paramount importance. An organization to undertake an educational survey must consist of members who are qualified from the educational point of view particularly the Jewish educational point of view. I do not mean that if a person of the Jewish persuasion be he national or religiously Jewish and even granted that he is a B.A., M.A., or even a Ph.D. that he is qualified to make a survey of such a serious matter. These men may be well educated from the Goy point of view, but may have had their Jewish education sadly neglected. Of course these self-same people may differ with one and claim to be profound Jewish scholars on the ground that they were bar mitzvah, can repeat their prayers in Hebrew, and may even know the Talmud from A. to Z. Still I maintain these mental giants could not claim to be well educated men from the Jewish, ethical, cultural and historical point of view and my belief is that the majority of the members of your local Bnai Brith Lodge come under that category. Of course I will be immediately told that we have quite a number of doctors, dentists and lawyers in our midst, surely they are qualified as educated men. Alack and alas, the fact that one has a right to tack on the tail of his name the letters, of M.D., D.D.S., B.C.L. or L.L.B., or even K.C., etc., etc., and etc., means nothing in my young life. I know quite a number of pants-makers and shoemakers, who are better educated and have even more intelligence than many of our professional men and probably would be better qualified to act as judges for an educational survey.

I take it for granted that the majority of the members of the Bnai Brith are business men, actually the people of the book viz., the cheque book. To them an educational survey would mean a question of dollars and cents. To Rabbi Stern it means "dollars and sense". No, my dear rabbi, you leave the Bnai Brith alone in this question. They are doing a wonderful work with their summer camp. They know the importance of a good sound healthy body. Of course you will at once quote the latter and say "A sound mind in a sound body", but you will admit they are doing excellent work. Just leave them alone, my dear Rabbi.

However, if you are anxious, for this educational survey, here is my suggestion. Pick out a dozen men who have received a good Jewish education, men who know the history of the Jews, History of Jewish Literature, History of the Jewish People and History of the Jewish Religion, say four members of the Reform Jewish faith, four of the Orthodox and four amongst the 50--50 Jews, then go to the Bnai Brith and tell them that you wish to work under their auspices and that you wish them to finance you. They will understand you at once, the moment you begin to talk money and will become sympathetic.

Dr. A. Maxwell Lightstone,
Montreal.

Editor
Canadian Jewish Review,

It appears to me that Rabbi Stern must have found material for his "Commentaries" of Dec. 6th issue rather scarce. Else, how can he account for having wound up his usual column with such stuff as he wrote in the article entitled "An Educational Survey?"

As a member of Mount Royal Lodge of The Independent Order Bnai Brith, I feel that Rabbi Stern's remarks should not be allowed to go unanswered, for they do not reflect very favourably on the lodge itself and may create some misunderstanding of the proposed survey.

Whether or not Rabbi Stern is entitled to credit for having originally suggested a Jewish educational survey is a matter that need not be discussed. As to the merits of the project, the need for a thorough, workable knowledge of the local situation is so self-evident that no one will deny the benefit that might accrue to local Jewry as the result of a proper survey. It is for this reason that Bnai Brith has undertaken the task.

The Rabbi may rest assured that the local Bnai Brith lodge has no intention of relinquishing that task. He must surely know, since he is also a member of the Educational Committee of the lodge, that steps have been taken to carry out the preliminary work necessary and it is only a question of time before a full investigation will have been made and a report submitted. There has at no time been any question of "dodging" the issue, as Rabbi Stern intimates. His remark "We shall soon call upon another Jewish organization to do that piece of work," provokes a smile. Does the worthy Rabbi imagine that the local lodge is here to do his bidding and must we fear his impatience? There is no denying the importance of the task and there is no intention on the part of Bnai Brith to hand it over to any other body. And I am sure that Rabbi Stern would not have us forego the celebration of Purim and Chanukah in our wonted manner. Has he not often deplored the lack of interest in the Jewish festivals?

It appears to me that the proper place to have taken this matter up would have been the floor of the lodge itself. However as the subject has been mentioned in this paper, it seems necessary to dispell any erroneous impression which the article may have created. It is with this in mind, rather than any desire to enter into controversy of the matter, that I have tried to shed a little more "light" on the subject of the Rabbi's commentaries.

Yours very truly,
H. M. TOKER, D.D.S.

In the dim dawn of creation, before man awoke to possess the earth and its treasures, nature stored in the beds of prehistoric seas the accumulations of vegetable and animal matter from which petroleum was to be evolved.

Millions of years passed. Years of imperceptible drifting of soil over petroleum sands, years of great bucklings and heavings of the earth's surface. The drifting soil buried the oil sands thousands of feet underground. The great heaving and folding of the earth's surface wrote the puzzles which as yet the geologist can only partly solve.

In Peru, South America, is an oil field which yields a particularly rich crude petroleum — a crude that possesses all the requirements for the production of a better motor oil. From it, Marvelube is refined.

Full - bodied, carbon-free and sulphur-free, Marvelube meets the exacting demands of the modern high-speed motor in the air and on the highways. Marvelube is now the standard lubricant for high-speed engines from coast to coast.

There is a grade of Marvelube refined to meet exactly the specifications of your car, truck or tractor. See the Marvelube Chart at Imperial Oil stations or dealers.
